

Health Promotion Research Institute

California State University, Fullerton

Health Promotion Research Institute

The California State University, Fullerton, Health Promotion Research Institute was established in 2009 as a university-wide institute at California State University, Fullerton (CSUF) in order to promote increased health-related research among faculty and collaborations with community.

The Health Promotion Research Institute (HPRI) serves as a catalyst and focal point for research, training, and community interchange to develop and disseminate health-related evidence-based information and programs.

HPRI Mission and Strategies

The HPRI mission is to create collaborative, multilevel solutions that empower individuals and communities to achieve optimal health for all. To accomplish this, the HPRI's strategies include:

1. Coordinate and advance interdisciplinary health research efforts at CSUF
2. Facilitate pre-award and post-award activities by members to increase external support for health-related research, particularly through use of multi-disciplinary/multi-agency writing teams
3. Provide enriched opportunities for student learning and student involvement in health research, thus better preparing the next generation of public health professionals
4. Collaborate with community leaders in understanding and addressing the critical public health needs and issues in Southern California

HPRI Structure

The HPRI is comprised of more than 50 faculty members from seven colleges across CSUF, and is governed by a Steering Committee and guided by a Community Advisory Committee. HPRI staff includes the Director, along with pre-award and post-award administrative staff.

Affiliated Research Centers

- Center for Cancer Disparities Research
- Center for Healthy Lifestyles and Obesity Prevention
- Center for Successful Aging
- Fall Prevention Center of Excellence
- Fibromyalgia & Chronic Pain Center

For more information, please see the HPRI website at <http://hpri.fullerton.edu> or email the HPRI at hpri@fullerton.edu.